

California's Broken Water System

Water supply operations in California require exhaustive navigation of a maze of bureaucracies. Water users face a disorienting network of more than 15 federal, state and regional agencies that control the water we all depend on.

